Christmas and the New Year

The Season of Celebration ...

... and Commemoration

Very soon there will be a lot of it about again: the rampant commercial side of Christmas, and then the gathering together of the family and the joyful celebration in church and chapel, singing the carols and listening once more to the story of the Nativity.

Currently we are poignantly commemorating the events of 1914, and this will continue as the centenaries of the battles and the losses of the First World War roll on through the next four years. Next year brings us centenaries of Magna Carta, and the Battles of Agincourt and of Waterloo, but let us reflect first on what happened on Christmas Day in 1914 in France.

On Christmas Eve the sound of men singing 'Silent Night' came from the German trenches; British troops joined in the singing. On Christmas morning these Tommies and these Fritzes, who had been enemies, met in no man's land, exchanged small gifts of food and tobacco, and played football. The 'authorities' did not approve of this fraternization, and tried to hush it up and prevent it happening again.

Not all the pieces in this edition are obviously about Christmas or the New Year, but they are all in some way about bringing people together and recognizing our common humanity. In Peace.

A Christmas letter from Christchurch: Heather Cooper

I have to confess that I love everything about Christmas. It's exhausting, but such a wonderful time. I love that, too!

It's a time to make contact with people - even if it is only the once a year card. It's about remembering all the people who have touched our lives over the years. It's a time to catch up on news, sometimes good, sometimes sad.

I love the chance to share Christmas carols and parties with a wide variety of groups; sometimes for clergy December is just one long party.

Best of all are the services, and for me the most special time in the whole Christmas season is the Christmas Eve Midnight Communion. In a quiet church with subdued lighting - probably candles - we sing and celebrate the birth of Jesus Christ. The communion serves to remind us of the link with Easter, too.

Christmas is about God who loves us enough to come and share our humanity. Whether we believe or not doesn't alter the fact of God's love. Christmas is about God who is involved in our lives and understands what it means to be human - surely this is the best reason of all to celebrate Christmas.

It has been said that without Christ Christmas is just another winter festival. I believe that without Christ there is no real meaning to the celebrations.

As you celebrate Christmas this year, in whatever way you choose to celebrate, may you glimpse something of God and the wonder of his love for you.

There is a Christmas poem I love: U A Fanthorpe's BC:AD Look it up for yourselves in her Christmas Poems (2002); the last lines are:-

“... this was the moment
When a few farm workers and three
Members of an obscure Persian sect
Walked haphazard by starlight straight
Into the kingdom of heaven.”

Every blessing for Christmas and all that 2015 will bring to you.

Christmas in Pokhara, Nepal: Jo Carroll

‘Merry Crishmus.’ The text was from my guide, reminding me I’d agreed to be up early to go hiking today.

Pokhara was twinkling but I did not look back as Tika led me through the city and across a suspension bridge into the foothills of the Himalaya. I puffed up, with boots and walking pole, as two women in flip-flops came down with oranges for the market. Would I like to buy some? Of course.

Less than a mile later we met a friend of Tika’s who took us to his house. His tree was laden with oranges – we must eat some. But we could not linger long, as his aunt expected us for lunch. High in the mountains there is little choice and we ate a traditional Nepali meal of rice, spinach and lentil dhal. At least she has a biogas stove and no longer has to collect wood for the forest for cooking. And her tree was laden with oranges; she picked some just for us.

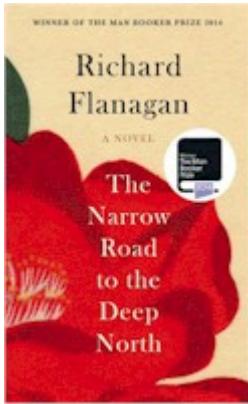

On the way home we paused by a small temple, gazed across the valley to the mountains, stark and beautiful. The birds sang; the air was sweet and clear. One old couple toddled out of their little house, to give us oranges. We visited another sister before making it back into town (another orange, of course.)

I just had time to shower and change before joining Tika and his family for supper. I bought them chocolates. Presents, I explained, are part of our Christmas tradition. And we’ll give you a traditional meal, Tika’s wife told me. She bent over a tiny stove on her rooftop to cook the rice, and spinach, and lentil dhal. Followed by

At home, families would be sated by now, many so full they could do nothing but flop in front of Mary Poppins. While I had been with people who had shared nothing but lentil dhal and oranges. And not because it was Christmas, but because this was all they had.

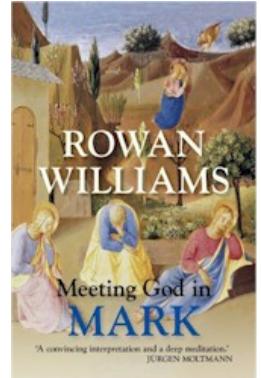

Reading this Christmas: Deborah Reynolds

Once the Christmas festivities are over I relish a somewhat quieter period to do some more extended reading. This year's Booker Prize Winner The Narrow Road to the Deep North by Richard Flanagan, and The Children Act by Ian McEwan, are already on my wish list but I've also been eyeing the many interesting books there are in Mustard Seed.

I'm longing to have a read of Rowan Williams' (former Archbishop of Canterbury) new book Meeting God in Mark, which looks full of fascinating and accessible insights into Mark's Gospel. As the lectionary readings for this Church Year are focussing on Mark, this book seems even more relevant. Over the years, I've found Rowan Williams writings incredibly helpful in exploring and thinking about the Christian faith in deeper ways. Timothy Radcliffe OP says,

'This wonderful book shows how Mark's beautiful and subtle Gospel still challenges our understanding of God and of how God works in our lives. It is written in a clear and vivid style and I could not put it down.'

Also on Mustard Seed shelves are the Grantchester Mysteries written by James Runcie (son of another former Archbishop of Canterbury!), which are an intriguing collection of short stories based upon the fictional life of an Anglican priest turned detective living in Cambridge in the 1950s. Some of the stories have been televised and certainly made entertaining viewing. What I expect to like in these novels is not only the crime genre itself, but also the gentle signposts signifying that life and people are not always as we expect them to be and the subtle reminders of faith in everyday life, e.g:

'Love was the most unpredictable and chameleon of emotions, sometimes sudden and unstable, able to flare up and die down; at other times loyal and constant, the pilot flame of a life. Sidney [the priest] touched his hands together in prayer. Then he gave himself up into silence. How we love determines how we live, he thought.'

Hopes and Fears for 2015: Jo Ripley

Paris 2015 looms large as a focus will aim to achieve, for the first negotiations, a binding, universal for hope when the world's leaders time in 20+ years of UN agreement on climate change.

The fear is that negotiations fall short and we face further costly delay in actions to avoid the worst impacts.

The US Department of Defence's recent report states that extreme weather, rising temperatures, unpredictable rainfall and rising oceans could fuel armed insurgency and heighten the impact of a pandemic, through their effects on political instability, poverty, migration and disputes over resources: "Climate change will affect the Department of Defence's ability to defend the Nation and poses immediate risks to U.S. national security."

Many big business groups recognise how climate and energy policy decisions have an enormous impact on investments and are concerned about the potential cost and risk associated with delayed action. The World Bank recognises the efficacy of taxation: "The most powerful move that a government can make in the fight against climate change is to put a price on carbon", but politicians are fearful of the reactions of the electorate.

There is a growing movement in the US for a revenue-neutral carbon tax: a steadily rising tax on the CO₂ of fossil fuels, with 100 % of the revenues reimbursed directly to all households, protecting them from the financial impact of the transition to a clean energy economy. The rising cost of fossil fuels increases the demand for low emission products, decreasing their cost as production rises and motivates investment in a low carbon economy. Carbon tax border adjustments would protect exports and encourage importing countries to follow suit.

The 'Carbon Tax and Dividend' is gaining support here and elsewhere, as an equitable and efficient tool for reducing greenhouse gas emissions and stabilizing our climate.

Do You Run a Local Organization? Are You Involved with a Local Charity?

Tower and Town finds itself with a modest surplus from time to time. It is a non-profit-making enterprise and is happy to give money away to any good local cause.

If you are involved, say, in a local voluntary organization which needs some financial support, please let us know.

We may be able to help with a small grant.

Another look at 'Holy War': John Osborne

Christians and Muslims have spent most of the last fourteen centuries confronting each other with fear and hostility. The sudden expansion of IS in the Middle East and the threat that some of their followers seem to pose nearer to home may have reinforced this impression of Islam, that it encourages aggression and condones violence. On the 'other' side, the American and British use of armed force in Iraq and Afghanistan is perceived as a latter-day 'crusade', hostile to Islam.

Yet both of these two great religions preach peace and tolerance as fundamental principles.

Islam has been represented as a religion that promotes its influence and justifies war under the label 'Jihad', a word mistranslated as 'Holy War'. 'Jihad', means 'struggle' or 'effort', and Mohammed himself made it clear that there are two forms of this: to defend one's religion is the Lesser Jihad; the Greater Jihad is the inner struggle against the worse parts of one's own nature, eg selfishness. Mainstream Muslim thinking has it that resorting to arms is justified only when the community of the faithful is under attack and when all other avenues, eg negotiation, have failed. War can be declared only by a proper religious authority and should never involve non-combatants or the destruction of property. The Christian notion of a 'Just War' is based on very similar principles.

But Islam is not endemically a 'religion of the sword'. Wars of looting and conquest have been described as 'wars of religion', when the powers-that-be used 'God' as justification for the 'sword'. The Koran insists that 'there is no compulsion in religion', and like the Bible, stresses the sanctity of life. Only God, who gives life, may take it away, and so unprovoked killing is wrong and suicide bombings particularly abhorrent.

Ed Hussain's The Islamist describes how misguided adolescent idealism led him to join an extremist Islamist organization that actively promotes the establishment of an Islamic State by revolutionary and violent means; and how a murder on a London street made him realize how far he had strayed from the core principles of Islam.

My wish for the New Year and beyond is for Christians and Muslims to reject simplistic views of each other, recognize the compassion that is common to both faiths and back away from extreme positions. As a noted academic has put it: it would help if Islam were to heal its divisions and we were to keep out of the Middle East.

A Wider View: James Kelly, Macular Society Support Group

Over two years ago I discovered I had a blocked vein in my left eye which had caused the retina to become distorted. This meant that I only had peripheral vision and any central vision was badly distorted. To start with the bad image was superimposed on the good image from my right eye. Slowly my brain has adapted and I am not aware of the bad image now. When I was at the Great Western Hospital having treatment I noticed a poster for the Marlborough Support Group of the Macular Society. I went to a meeting to see what they did and perhaps even help in some way.

If you have any form of visual impairment you are most welcome.

The group provides a social meeting with perhaps a speaker or entertainment. Sometimes a trip out is arranged. They also provide advice by having people from the Macular Society  national office, Wiltshire Blind, RNIB and other organisations.

I now understand how having impaired vision has a drastic effect on the quality of life of those affected. Many are not able to drive, watch television, read or use a computer. As this condition usually affects the elderly, they may live on their own, which makes getting out and socialising difficult.

The small group of members enjoy coming each month because we know we all have similar problems. One member said that many people don't understand what it's like to walk into a room and not be able to recognise anyone, even your friends. This is because central vision loss makes peoples faces blurred or blanked out grey. Members enjoy the social aspects of the meetings and the opportunity to discuss their problems.

We have been fortunate: a couple of grants have helped us fund transport and sometimes subsidise an event. Our main problem has been attracting enough members from the Marlborough area to make the meetings viable. We would like to see more people come along and their carers are always welcome.

The Marlborough Support Group meets on the last Thursday of every month at 1.30 pm at the Wesley Hall in Oxford Street, Marlborough. Contact Linda Chapman on 01672 512471.

Cards for Christmas

The angel on the front cover of this edition and here in this article is on a card being sold by the Friends of Wiltshire Churches in aid of the Wiltshire Historic Churches Trust. A second card has a wonderful stained-glass window from St Peter and St Paul, Heytesbury.

The Trust raises money for the repair of churches and chapels in Wiltshire and in the last year it has made grants of between £1,000 and £5,000 for repairs to 29 places of worship in Wiltshire, several local to Marlborough.

Please support the Wiltshire Historic Churches Trust by buying cards. Write to Brian Woodruffe, Anchorholme, Hop Gardens, Whiteparish, Salisbury SP5 2ST or e-mail him at aded@bjwtuscany1.waitrose.com

Cards, with envelopes, are £2.50 for a pack of 5, with minimum order of four packs and a postage charge of £2.

The Friends help to raise the money through membership fees and activities such as visits to churches. The annual Ride and Stride in which individuals take part, visiting scores of churches on a September day, is a big fund-raiser.

Please become a Friend of Wiltshire Churches: John Osborne (p.28) has details or write to Martin Knight, The Manor, Winterbourne Bassett SN4 9PU.

The Bundlers: Norma Dobie writes

Rosemary Johnston and I have been 'bundling' (counting Tower and Town into bundles ready for the Distributors) each month since 2000 and I would like to thank Ann Owen who, with the help of Linda Wells, has taken over from us.

The Editor adds: Our thanks to Norma and her helpers, Audrey Pitman and Vinnie Harris, for all that they have done. She is not lost to Tower and Town, of course, as she handles all our subscriptions with great competence and commitment.

Peter Noble suggests a Marlborough Walk

A friend once proudly announced that there were several good walks within ten minutes of his town centre. Somewhat ungraciously I responded by saying there are probably several good walks within ten minutes of all British town centres, London excepted - although my daughter, who works near Trafalgar Square, recently expressed her pleasure and privilege at being able to jog through Green Park and Hyde Park and daily enjoy them and the local architecture that tourists pay small fortunes to visit.

However, I can think of few countries that can boast such varied and pleasant scenery as we have in Britain, and all so accessible. Our countryside may not be 'grand', we have no massive waterfalls, no giant redwoods, no glaciers or high mountains, even our biggest rivers are quite modest, but nor do we have to drive for hours to get anywhere or for our scenery to change character.

We are so lucky in Marlborough, for we have good and varied walks even more accessible, and here is one that starts at the Library in the High Street!

- 1 Take Hyde Lane to the all-weather sports area then follow the path beside this and parallel to Hyde Lane (not to the College complex).
- 2 At the top of the grassy path turn left up the rough road to the cemetery.
- 3 Turn right along the track between the old and new graveyards to the Common then briefly join the new footpath left to the cemetery gates.
- 4 So cross the road (Free's Avenue) and continue left along the edge of the golf fairway.
- 5 At the end is a small path through shrubby trees that briefly meets the road then swings right through an open gateway into a field.
- 6 Turn left along the edge of the field until you are opposite the large entrance to the Manton Estate. Cross the road, enter the estate and follow the metalled road that eventually swings left to the farm.
- 7 Just before the farm, turn right up a quite steep rough road beside a wood.
- 8 At the top, the road becomes more of field-side track that swings right at the end of the trees. Here you should see a signpost and a path that turns left. Follow it with a hedge and field on your left, an open field on your right.
- 9 The track skirts a few trees and enters another field above the College Fields housing estate. Turn left (houses below on your right) and follow the field edge until you finally descend to a small road.
- 10 Turn right and keep going until you reach the A4 opposite the College Chapel, then left back to the High Street.

Distance: generously 3.5 miles.

Karen Osborne Cooks with a Broken Arm

This time last year I fell on black ice and broke my right arm. In case anyone has the same bad luck this year, I now have a few tips to pass on about how to produce tasty meals with only one arm over Christmas.

I had a good start, as my freezer was full of soups and other dishes I had cooked in advance of the festive season. John, my husband, discovered the ready made meals at Cook in the High Street and proudly served up Partridge with Pear in Wine Sauce on Christmas night as if he had conjured it up himself.

But after the festive season we felt like simpler fare and John felt hungry enough to have a go at improvising in the kitchen. Excellent though he is at washing up and other chores, he had to brush up his elementary knowledge in the art of cookery, and needed my help. This was one of our combined efforts:

Cauliflower Cheese

First catch a husband, stand over him and instruct him in the art of breaking a cauliflower into small florets. (“What’s a floret?” he asked.) Show him how to peel and chop up a clove of garlic into small pieces without cutting himself.

Throw all this into a roasting pan and sprinkle with cumin (generously) and salt and pepper and pour over some olive oil. Make sure that husband gets his fingers in the trough so that all the cauliflower is covered in the oil. Then put the dish in a pre-heated oven (200 degrees) for about 30 minutes. After 20 minutes add a few small tomatoes cut in half (by husband).

Meanwhile preheat an oven-proof dish, and transfer the roasted ingredients to it. Add a few chopped olives and some small pieces of cooked ham (left over from weekend lesson of baked gammon – tricky for husband but worth doing as it produces several meals). Add a few tablespoonfuls of crème fraiche and mix it all together. Sprinkle the dish with dried breadcrumbs and cover with some grated cheddar cheese. Return to the oven and cook for about 20 minutes. Get husband to serve.

We both agreed that this was tasty and worth repeating with two arms, or by an unsupervised husband.

Family News from your local community: Audrey Peck

Ann Sargant emailed with the sad news that her mother, Margaret Vale, has died, aged 94. She had been a widow since WW2 when Ann's father was one of the prisoners of war in the Far East who did not return. When John and Ann were here at Preshute Margaret gave them her full support in family and parish life and she was a devoted helper at the Jubilee Centre.

My family are proud of Caroline (Carrie) because never having played an instrument she joined the Phoenix Band in January and, in her more mature years, managed to learn to play the baritone horn AND play it while marching along the High Street and down New Road in the Remembrance Day Parade. Sian, her daughter, recorded a short video as evidence to show her sceptical friends. She wants me to mention their Christmas Concert in Froxfield Village Hall on Dec 21st at 3 pm

Remembrance Day was especially relevant to me because my dad joined the Wiltshire Regiment on Aug 11th 1914. He came home physically fit but having suffered shell shock which returned for a short time about 10 years later.

It was really nice to see Gerald Smith at the parade. He has been unable to walk for three months after his knee op. Let's hope he will get back to driving for LINK.

Margaret and Tony Killick's daughter, Julia, is spending a year in Abu Dhabi. She is having a career break from her publishing job and is teaching music. She is working at the International Music Institute in Abu Dhabi. She has been there just over two months and is really loving it, although apart from a flute choir which she has joined, it is slow going getting to know people outside her job. The family are looking forward to seeing her again at Christmas.

On 30th October, after a battle with cancer Mark O'Brien passed away. The 32 year old husband of Peta O'Brien, the Devotion leader with the Marlborough churches, Mark will be sadly missed.

His funeral at Christchurch on 11th November was a celebration of his life and the church was packed with family and friends. We continue to pray for Peta and his 2 year old son Ethan.

Marlborough Churches Together Fraternal Meetings

Will be held on Wednesday 3rd December and Wednesday 7th January. Please contact MCT Secretary, Alison Selby, (alison.selby@crossmead.net) if you would like any issues raised.

Posada

If you would like to host one of the knitted 'Holy Families' during December please contact Andrew Studdert-Kennedy andrewsk1959@btinternet.com or 514357. The Holy Families will be brought together at the 3.00pm Crib Service on Christmas Eve in St Mary's. Don't forget to look out for the Holy Family set travelling along the North side of the High Street and the Three Kings travelling along the South side during December.

Filling Station

For information about the December and January Filling Station at St Peter's School, Marlborough, please contact Vincent and Helen Stokes at hcstokes@gmail.com

Week of Prayer for Christian Unity, 18th-24th January 2014:

Please join us for a Quaker style service on Wednesday 21st January 2015 at 7.30pm in Friends' Meeting House, The Parade, Marlborough.

Prayer Time for those less fortunate:

At this festive season, spare a thought and a prayer for our friends in West Africa where the terror of Ebola haunts people's lives, and in South Sudan where violence and fear persist. We think particularly of our many friends in the Gambia where Ebola in nearby countries has greatly reduced the tourist numbers and where there are serious worries about the crops after bad rains.

Lent Talks 2015 - diary dates

Revd Sue Armitage will be coordinating another 'Week of Guided Prayer' during the first week of Lent 23rd-28th February.

Marlborough Churches Together have organised a series of talks based on the psalms on the four Wednesday evenings in March 2015 (4th, 11th, 18th, 25th.) with a visiting speaker Rev. Dr. Knut M. Heim from Trinity College Bristol.

All the meetings will be held at Christchurch 7.30pm. More details on these events will follow in February's Tower and Town.

An Old Bulgarian Song of the Yule Log

with an acknowledgement to Mercia MacDermott, from 'Bulgarian Folk Customs'

I am a little golden tree, a golden fruitful tree;
I shall grow right up to the sky,
My boughs will drop to earth;
My leaves will sprout pearls,
My flowers will be pure silver,
And my fruit will be pure gold.

The Young God will descend by me
And will give good gifts:
To the maiden a tiny pearl,
To the mother pure silver
And to the father pure gold,
A house full of children,
Lambs, calves, foals and lion-maned bees.
Life, health and jollity!
